Classroom Training Session on Claims Management of Fire
Insurance - Program ID – CPG52
(From: 11th – 12th January 2024)

Relevance of the Program:-

Historically Fire and Engineering insurances have been the main stay for General Insurers. In addition to being major avenues for generating insurance premiums, these lines of business have the potential of causing large losses as well. Insurers usually do a thorough job when they evaluate property claims vis-à-vis policy wordings and causes of claims. Conventionally, insurers pay a lot of attention to claims in these portfolios and are very careful in evaluating risks and building loss control measures into the policy.

Though each company has its own internal systems and procedures for claims processing, this course seeks to help claims professionals appreciate their roles in a better light and help them in integrating their knowledge back into underwriting, risk management, loss prevention and claims control functions so that these classes of business are better managed.

College of Insurance has developed this course to suit the specific needs of professionals from insurance companies dealing with Property insurance claims – focusing on effective and efficient claims management techniques as also risk analysis, loss prevention/ loss control aspects.
